COMMENT OF THE DAY

Question Of Methods

THE opening day of the foreign affairs debate in the House of Commons did not produce any new declarations of British policy, and was for the most part colourless in tone and ordinary in texture. Mr Butler contented himself with generalities and left the impression that the British Government was inclined to a wait-and-see attitude regarding problems such as Egypt, Germany and Austria. It is recognised that Britain's position in the dispute with Egypt concerning the future of the Canal Zone has already been fully stated and calls for no embellishment. The next move, if one is to be made, is entirely up to President Naguib and his government. Nevertheless it is of some importance that the British case has been strengthened by the support it has received from the United States. Both countries are in agreement that an effective base in the Canal Zone is essential for the future security of the Middle East, and, in fact, the western world. The strong attitude which Mr Foster Dulles has adopted may prove a sufficient influence on General Naguib to make possible new Anglo-Egyptian discussions of a positive nature. The current hiatus is injurious to the interests of Egypt whose legitimate claims cannot be met unless she is prepared to reach a reasonable compromise with Britain.

IN discussing the Washington talks before the House, Mr Butler appeared to be less assured; almost on the defensive. There will be no disagreement, however, with his contention that in tackling the political problems of Europe, it is necessary, not to erect barriers between the Western Allies and Russia, but to try and build bridges by which the Big Four can begin to reach a common understanding and work out essential principles for resolving the intricate questions of the future of Germany and Austria. Mr Attlee, in his criticism of the acting Prime Minister's speech, deprecated the substitution of high level discussions by the proposed Foreign Ministers conference, and he was undoubtedly expressing the feelings of a substantial body of British opinion. Nevertheless the Opposition Leader failed to indicate how, at this present time of political upheaval in Russia, a meeting between the leaders of the Big Four could be satisfactorily arranged.

DISAPPOINTMENT there may be in the fact that Sir Winston Churchill's proposal of last May cannot at this moment be implemented, but this is not to say that a conference on a lower level would not produce valuable results. It is of importance that the Big Three should retain the initiative in the tackling of European problems, and the very least, therefore, which could have been accomplished at the Washington talks was to decide to invite Russia to diplomatic conversations on outstanding issues. It is now apparent that the various problems which plague international relations cannot be settled at one fell swoop; they must be dealt with piecemeal. This was fully recognised and accepted at the Washington talks, and it is clearly the conviction of the American, British and French governments that more decisive results are likely from adopting this line of action than by immediate informal top-level discussions between the Big Four.

Workers Plan To Overthrow E. German Regime

JUNE 17 RIOTS DESCRIBED AS A DRESS REHEARSAL

Berlin, July 21.

East Germans outlawed for leading the June 17 uprising said here today that they were building a movement to work for the downfall of the East German regime.

They said workers throughout the East Zone would not give up their fight against the present leaders and that sabotage was slowing down the industries of East Germany.

This view was supported tonight by the West German news agency, DPA, which reported the existence of a widespread, well organised anti-Communist movement in the Magdeburg, Bitterfeld, Halle, Merseburg, Eisleben and Jena areas of East Germany.

Quoting eyewitness reports, the agency said that in these regions, where there are some of the largest industrial plants in East Germany, workers had evolved a system of sabotage against Communist trade union leadership.

When work in one factory must, under threat of severe punishment, be resumed, work in a neighbouring factory slows down or ceases, the agency said.

Daily Mirror's Princess Margaret Poll Condemned

London, July 22.

Britain's voluntary Press Council, meeting for the first time here yesterday, criticised the Daily Mirror, picture paper, with a circulation of more than four million, for conducting a readers' poll on whether Princess Margaret should be allowed to marry Group Captain Peter Townsend.

The Council—made up of 15 editorial and ten managerial representatives of the newspaper industry—has as one of its objects "to maintain the character of the British press in accordance with the highest professional and commercial standards".

Trading With China Queries

London, July 21.

Lord Barnby, a Conservative Peer, asked in the House of Lords today if "in view of the acuteness of feeling in the United States" on British trade with Communist China, Britain would make representations to emphasise the difference between strategic and non-strategic materials.

Lord Leathers, Secretary of State for the Co-ordination of Transport, Fuel and Power, replied that the question presupposed that nothing had been done already. "It had been constantly represented and will continually be the subject of discussion," he added.

Lord Winster, who asked if the Government had information that British ships trading with China would be refused bunkers in United States ports, said it seemed "unfair and unkind" that bunkers might be refused to British ships.

He hoped the matter would be followed up if any were refused. Replying to his question, Lord Leathers said the new American regulations introduced on July 6 to govern the supply of petroleum products to ships in United States ports were not aimed only at British ships. They applied to any foreign ships entering ports under American jurisdiction.

"The workers regard the June 17 uprising as a dress rehearsal for the future, whose lessons must be studied and applied," DPA said. "They want to continue the resistance, which has never really ceased, in a more subtle fashion."

The agency said that by these tactics workers in the Mansfeld copper combine—East Germany's main source of copper—forced the release of arrested strike leaders.

A representative of the outlawed East German Government leaders hoped to inspire awe in the workers by ruthless court sentences and by using food as a weapon to regain complete control, but he described the resistance spirit as widespread, rooted and full of hatred.

Today East Berlin newspapers reported a promise by the Soviet authorities of 231 million roubles (about £21 million) worth of food to East Germany on credit. This offer is four times that made by the United States earlier this month, but food shipments, worth $16 million (about £6,357,100) are being sent by the United States as a free gift.

No indication was given of how repayment will be made to the Soviet Union, but most Western observers here believed it would be by increasing deliveries of East German machinery and precision products to Russia.—Reuter.

"Absurd" Protest By Russia

London, July 21.

Diplomatic quarters here today described as "absurd" Russia's protest to Turkey that the projected British and United States naval visits to Istanbul were intended as a "military demonstration".

They pointed out that courtesy visits by naval units to friendly countries were the normal practice, and in no way directed against other powers.

The Turkish Government today studied the gist of the Soviet note about the visits of British and United States warships to Istanbul this summer, though the full text has not yet been received.

No official comment will be made until the full text has been considered. But usually well-informed circles here thought the note was not of much importance, and said its tone could be termed "mild."

Commenting on Russia's protest to Turkey over the visit of the U.S. warships to Istanbul, Mr John Foster Dulles, American Secretary of State, told his weekly press conference today that Turkey was a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and was taking part in the military and air planning of the NATO Command. It was entirely normal for the British and American warships to call at Istanbul and no military demonstration was contemplated, he said.—Reuter.

Well guarded by police, and kept under control in a large iron barred cage, are these Sicilian bandits, seen during their trial on many charges at the Monte Vergini Assizes in Palermo, Sicily. The gangsters are members of the band of Giuliano, once controlled by Calabrese. Included in the bandits on trial is tall handsome Pasquale Sceltrino who is already under life sentence for his part in the machine gun massacre of 11 people.—London Express.

PRESIDIUM MEETING POSTPONED

London, July 22.

The Soviet news agency Tass said last night that the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR had postponed until August 5 the Supreme Soviet session originally fixed for July 28. No reason for the postponement was given.

It will be the second meeting of the Supreme Soviet since Stalin's death and is expected to ratify the decision of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet to dismiss Lavrenti Beria as an agent of international imperialism.

The meeting is also expected to consider the annual state budget. The last Supreme Soviet session on March 15 approved the appointment of the Council of Ministers headed by the Prime Minister, Mr Georgi Malenkov. Beria figured then as one of the "big three" with Mr Malenkov and the Foreign Minister, Mr Vyacheslav Molotov. The new meeting will be its fifth session since the Parliament was elected in 1950. It was announced on July 14 that the Supreme Soviet had been summoned for its fifth session on July 28.—Reuter.

Demonstrations In Teheran

Teheran, July 22.

Communists and anti-Communists staged two big separate demonstrations here yesterday to mark the first anniversary of Dr Mohammed Mossadeq's return to power. Troops and police guarded the Majlis (Parliament) but there were no incidents.

The first demonstration yesterday morning consisted mostly of the National Front and Pan-Iran groups (both pro-government), but in the afternoon Tudeh (Communist) Party members and their supporters held their National Day demonstrations. Broadcasting on the eve of the demonstrations, Dr Mossadeq appealed for unity—"the weapon with which we shall conquer our foes"—Reuter.

SUCCESS by Lord Beaverbrook

IN 1921, just after the first world war, Lord Beaverbrook wrote a book called SUCCESS.

It was a forceful, dogmatic, opinionated book addressed to young men of ambition. It told them what to do if they wanted to make a fortune. Lord Beaverbrook was then 42, in the mid-life of his own success. He had made a fortune in Canada, had spent a decade in British politics, and had recently started his career as a newspaper proprietor.

TIMELY ADVICE
The advice and counsel contained in SUCCESS is as urgent and timely today as it was in 1921. This newspaper believes that SUCCESS will act as a stimulus to people of determination everywhere. For these reasons the China Mail has arranged to print a series of extracts from SUCCESS beginning on Saturday. Lord Beaverbrook has written a foreword to the series—an article in which, at the age of 74, he looks back on the advice he gave in 1921. This article will be printed in the China Mail ON FRIDAY.

Alpinist Safe After Ordeal

Chamonix, July 22.

Mountaineer Georges Barlaqui staggered down the rugged slopes of Mont Blanc yesterday after 70 hours perched on a narrow ledge of the Aiguille du Fou (Madman's Peak). The young student denied an earlier report by a guide that he had dangled at the end of a rope during the ordeal. With only a pot of honey for food he squatted alone on the Peak, one of the most dangerous in the range, too terrified to attempt the descent. He did not know that his companion, 27-year-old Claude Chullivart, had fallen to his death.

At dawn a fully equipped rescue party set out to climb the perilous peak and raised him to safety. He was blue with cold and ravenously hungry but was not seriously injured.—Reuter.

ALLEGED REDS ARRESTED

Barcelona, July 21.

Thirty people, charged with attempting the clandestine reorganisation of the Catalan Socialist Unified (Communist) Party at Barcelona, were arrested here tonight, after the police had raided a secret printing shop.—Reuter.

US JUDGE DIVORCED

Baker, Oregon, July 21.

Mrs Mildred Douglas today won an uncontested divorce from Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. She charged desertion. Mr Douglas was the judge who on June 17 granted a stay of execution to Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who were later sent to the electric chair for betraying atom secrets to Russia.

Mrs Douglas said her husband, whom she married in 1923, left her "abandoned and alone while engaged in his work and in travels to remote places in the world." They have a grown-up son and a daughter.—Reuter.

Minister Tells Union Official To Resign

Johannesburg, July 22. Mr. Charles E. Swart, South African Minister of Justice, has ordered Sir Issy Wolfson to resign from his position as Secretary of the National Baking Industrial Union.

The Minister acted under the Suppression of Communism Act, passed by Dr. Daniel Malan's National Government in 1950, which also prevents Wolfson from being a member of any other trade union.

The Act declared unlawful all Communist organizations or bodies propagating or furthering the ends of Communism. — Reuter.

French Liner Sails An Empire Route

France's latest liner, the 20,400-ton Antilles, is providing a new Empire link for Britain. After calling at Southampton on her second out-and-run to the West Indies, the white-painted Antilles is due in more British ports than French on the other side of the Atlantic.

In a month's round trip, which clips a week off the old schedule, she will visit Barbados, Trinidad and Jamaica. There were 300 passengers bound for Britain on the just-completed maiden voyage.

On board the Antilles the crew already regard her as a lucky "black-cat" ship. Master is Captain Maitland. "Frequently it is as though you were calling the cat," he said, smiling.

The Antilles was built to be "as handy as a London taxi." Because of the restricted space in some of her ports of call, her hull design was planned after model tests in tanks.

All passengers in this three-class ship get free wine with their meals.

To suit her warm-climate run, the Antilles has an open-air swimming pool. Main deck floor in the ship is of glass, through which changing lights make patterns.

Bohlen On Way To Moscow

Paris, July 21. The American Ambassador in Moscow, Mr. Charles Bohlen, arrived today by air from Washington after conferring with the Secretary of State, Mr. John Foster Dulles.

Getting Engines Re-Lit Problem For Jet Experts

British aero-engine designers are making good progress with one of the most difficult technical problems of the jet age — that of relighting the engines again at great heights when they have stopped and the flame is out.

If designers succeed in making it possible for aircrews to switch jet engines off in flight, knowing they can be lit up again, they will be effectively giving the new jets much greater range and flexibility than ever before.

Jet bombers, for instance, will be able to climb away from base on four engines, cut down to two for cruising, thus reducing fuel consumption and nearly doubling range, and switch off to four jets again when over the target. Jet transports would also be able to take advantage of this technique.

Up till now a jet aircraft which had an engine out would always have to descend to below its cruising height before it was possible to relight. But engineers believe it will be possible eventually to give practical relighting at any operational altitude. There are other cases, besides the jet bomber and transport, when relighting is necessary. The most important is when the engine has been put out accidentally by harsh throttle movements during combat, and it is necessary to relight it immediately.

This development makes possible a completely new technique which may become widely used, since it takes full advantage of the jet engine's peculiar characteristics most efficiently near its full power, it is wasteful in fuel to run all the engines at reduced power. It is far better to run only half the engines at full power.

WEIGHT OF ENGINES
True, there is the weight of the dead engines to carry around, but designers claim this is more than offset by the weight of fuel saved.

It might be thought that it would be as easy to restart an engine high in the air as it is on the ground. But, at the great heights where the jet flies best, there is so little oxygen in the air that it is difficult for a flame to catch.

When the engine has been switched off it does not stop dead. A blast of cold air is pouring into the air intake and continues to turn it over. Indeed, one of the problems of relighting is to get the engine to slow down sufficiently to its starting revolutions.

Another problem is that too can form inside the engine and upset the flow of air necessary for starting.

The pilot actually relights an engine by pressing a "relight" button in the cockpit. This produces a continuous spark in the combustion chambers of the engine. This sounds simple, but it is only by using great ingenuity that designers have been able to achieve a flow of air through the engine which has the correct characteristics at all altitudes for certain relighting.

Liner Booked For Emigrants

To help the thousands of people who want to go to Canada from Britain, the 10,000-ton liner Sydney has been booked for four special trips.

Following a request by the Canadian Government, the Sydney was made available by the Inter-Governmental Committee for European Migration.

"She will enable several thousand extra immigrants to settle in their new homes in Canada in good time before the winter," said Mr. Hugh Gibson, Director of the Committee.

"The demand for places is enormous," said a spokesman of the shipping agents in London. "All four trips were sold out in less than a month. Fares are £24 first class and from £25 10s. to £26 10s. tourist class. Children up to 12 go half price. Fares for babies of less than one year are 27 first class, £3 10s. tourist."

East Germans Kept Out

Cologne, July 21. A conference of the West German Miners' Union today refused to admit three observers from the East German Miners' Union.

Most of the members attending the conference also protested against a proposal by the Chairman, Herr August Schmidt, to read out a letter which the East Germans brought with them. The letter was not read out.

Herr Schmidt said the East Germans were refused admittance because they represented a union which had not supported the workers in the East German revolt last month but had opposed them. — Reuter.

Of Similar Strikes

Paris, July 21. France's daring airborne strike in Indo-China, which smashed the key Langson supply base on Red China's frontier, has demonstrated a new strategy which can be applied successfully to other Asian anti-Communist wars.

That was virtually the unanimous conclusion today of both high Allied and senior French officers closely following the lightning campaign which they took for the first time fully exposed the Viet's technical superiority over the manpower of the East.

There are lessons in the operation which will help the United Nations to force the Communists to observe any truce in Korea, these officers feel.

The British in Malaya, too, can profit from a study of the brilliant planning of "Operation Swallow" which already is being compared to General Douglas MacArthur's masterful Korea landing at Inchon.

But unlike Inchon, the French operation was completely around and over the enemy without the usual frontal ground attack in support.

A VINDICATION
Instead of punching overland to relieve the airborne task force French troops sailed unmolested around the Communists' flank.

The four-day triple thrust by land, sea and air is viewed now as a vindication of the new strategy outlined by General Pierre L. Bodeet when he left his post at Supreme Allied Headquarters here to become Deputy Supreme Commander in Indo-China.

Gen. Bodeet then said that a completely new approach, using air power and airborne troops as never before, could guarantee success in Indo-China. Despite some reluctance on the part of the more conservative generals to agree, Gen. Bodeet said that it was France's only way to defeat the hordes of Communist Vietnam.

Here is the way French and Allied strategists look at "Operation Swallow" which did just what Gen. Bodeet predicted: Western technical superiority for the first time was fully exploited. Units were not thrown into a land battle against large numbers of enemy troops. They were transported by air to "where the enemy wasn't" and gained complete success.

NOT WASTED
Air power was not "frictioned over the map" but was concentrated on the single major target.

Sea power and armour were used in support.

Destruction of the target was assured by the 3,000 paratroopers landed at Langson. It was not just left to fighters and bombers which in Korea all too often have registered exaggerated claims.

When the enemy began to move toward the main force at Langson, a second force of paratroopers was dropped south of the city to keep the Reds off balance. When the second group was spotted, an armoured task force was landed by sea and sent racing inland to cover the retreat of both airborne groups.

PATTON THEORY
"That is what Patton meant by modern war," an American officer explained.

"You can keep Gooks running all over hell when you have — and they haven't — an air force, a navy and trained men."

He referred to the MacArthur landing at Inchon where the narrow peninsula of Korea is even more suitable for such airborne strikes relieved by a sea task force than in Indo-China where it was tried.

He continued: "Such a dramatic use of air power and parachute troops in Korea would give the Chinese some second thoughts about trying anything funny after an armistice — when they realize we have an army that can run around and over their front line fences and into their big back-yard." — United Press.

New Wonder Drugs Are Possibility

Washington, July 21. A Smithsonian Institution expert said today that present day "wonder drugs" such as Penicillin and Streptomycin may be replaced some day by new antibiotics.

Mr. George Griffenhagen, Associate Curator of the U.S. National Museum's division of medicine and health, made the statement in connection with the opening of a Museum exhibition of antibiotics.

The Museum is holding the exhibition in celebration of the 25th anniversary of the discovery of Penicillin by Sir Alexander Fleming, the British scientist, in London.

Mr. Griffenhagen said that like most great discoveries, antibiotics have received much discredit, largely through misuse and misunderstanding.

But, he said, they are scarcely re-valued as there is scarcely a person who does not know some one whose life had been saved or extended by the use of the "wonder drugs."

As for the future, he said that since there are still thousands of microorganisms to be classified and tested, "there will doubtless be many more antibiotics discovered in the years to come and perhaps one or more of these will replace all their predecessors."—United Press.

Eight Treaties Ratified

Washington, July 21. The United States Senate today ratified treaties of friendship, commerce and navigation with eight countries.

The countries were: Japan, Germany, Denmark, Greece, Italy, Finland, Iran and Ethiopia.

The agreements were part of a programme to develop a series of modern commercial treaties whose general aim is "to assure protection for American citizens and American interests in foreign countries and advance American economic and foreign policy objectives."—Reuter.

ESSENTIAL TO SECURITY

Copenhagen, July 21. Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Saunders, the retiring Chief of the Atlantic Pact Air Forces, who is on a farewell visit to Denmark, said today that he strongly favoured Atlantic Pact airmen being stationed on Danish soil.

"This is a matter for the decision of governments," he said, "but I hope personally a form of co-operation may be arranged whereby non-Danish NATO air forces can be stationed in Denmark. It is absolutely certain that no country is able to put up an effective air defence on its own."—Reuter.

"LIVING IN A FOOL'S PARADISE"

Washington, July 21. Mr. Val Peterson, Federal Civil Defence Administrator, said today that Soviet bombers could now reach almost all parts of the United States on "one-way trips" with the capacity to drop bombs of up to 100 of the nation's largest cities.

"We spend billions on how to defeat the enemy but only a handful of dollars on how to protect the American people from possible enemy atom bombs," he told the Senate Appropriations Committee.

He said the United States was "living in a fool's paradise" by refusing to spend money on civil defence.

The House of Representatives Appropriations Committee reduced a US$125,000,000 (about £44,042,800) Civil Defence money request to $37,770,000 (about £13,489,200).

Telling Senators the Committee had "slashed mercilessly," Mr. Peterson contended very little was being done in the way of research on the results of an atom bomb attack and that in the event of a chemical attack there were no gas masks to protect the people. —Reuter.

Some Below Target

London, July 21. Polish States produced 16 per cent more goods in the first half of 1953 than in the first half of 1952, but the output of certain "important" articles was below the nation's target, according to a State Planning Commission announcement quoted by the Polish news agency today.

The State Commission, which declared the total production plan was "fulfilled and over-fulfilled," said the production of machine-tools, crude oil, non-ferrous metals and the chemical industry fell short. The agricultural and food industry and the meat and dairy industry also did not fulfil their planned tasks. —Reuter.

Rome, July 22. Italy's Premier, Signor Alcide De Gasperi, presenting his new Christian Democrat Government to Parliament last night, made an urgent appeal to Italy's allies to support her in her quarrel with Yugoslavia over the Trieste territory.

"The hour has come to render justice to the Italian people," he declared, while deputies broke into a frenzy of applause.

He warned the Western allies that failure to satisfy Italy's claims on Trieste, half occupied by Yugoslavia and half by Anglo-American forces, "would have fatal repercussions on the Italians."

He said that Italy raised no objection to the Balkan military pact between Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey.

But he solemnly declared that there can be no possibility of similar military co-operation between Italy and Yugoslavia as long as the two countries are divided over Trieste.

He added: "Everything has been tried to find a solution by direct negotiation, but without success."

LOUDLY APPLAUDED

All but the Communist and leftwing Socialist deputies frequently broke into the Premier's statement on Trieste with loud applause.

They listened in silence to the rest of his speech, tracing the programme of his precarious week-old Government.

The debate on the programme is expected to last a week, to be followed by a vote of confidence.

Indications last night were that the new Government would narrowly win the vote, mainly by means of the neutrality of the Rightwing Monarchists.

Immediately after presenting the Government and its programme to the Chamber of Deputies, Premier De Gasperi motored to the Senate to repeat his speech there.

The Chamber debate of the next week will be repeated in the Senate, where a vote of confidence will also be taken. —Reuter.

EX-SOLDIER FINDS HIS NAME ON MEMORIAL

After eight years a 70-year-old Cleveland, Yorkshire, couple have been reunited with their son, whose name heads the list of dead on the local War Memorial.

They are Mr and Mrs William Arnsby, who live at a lonely farm in East Lothian. Their son, Herbert, has returned home eight years after he was missing after discharge from a military hospital in Belgium where he had treatment for a nervous disorder.

He joined the Army in 1943, at the age of 18, and served in France after D-Day with the Reconnaissance Corps. He was transferred to the Pioneer Corps and after a heavy bombardment was admitted to hospital in February, 1944. A medical certificate dated March 1945 stated that he was then released to his unit after treatment for an "anxiety state."

About this time, Arnsby says, he heard that a second brother had been killed in action.

"I do not know what happened. I just sort of lost my memory and wandered about near blind, where the hospital was," he said.

"Some people found me lying exhausted in a field and looked after me for a couple of weeks. In my pocket they found the address of a family I had made friends with at Anist, some miles away."

He was taken to this family and for eight years he had not been outside the house.

"Then gradually I got better," he says, "I read in the papers about the Coronation amnesty for deserters and got a protection certificate from the War Office."

His return home has caused a problem for Lothian Urban Council. Arnsby's name, top of the list on the War Memorial, stands above those of his brother John, killed in Sicily in 1943 while serving with The Green Howards, and his brother William, killed in action in Burma in 1945 while serving with The Royal Berkshire Regiment.

Another brother, who was totally disabled by a gas attack, was wounded.

INDO-PORTUGUESE DISPUTE OVER GOA

Looks Alarming But Not To Be Taken Seriously

India's withdrawal of her representative in Lisbon, alarming though it may look in Europe, should not be taken more seriously than it is meant in Delhi.

It is a warning and a reminder, it is not the prelude to hostilities.

India is beginning to be tired of having "those pimplies," on her map, be they Pondicherry, Yanam, where a miniature blockade is being waged, Daman, or Goa. But India will not do anything drastic: in the end India will wait before she absorbs these meaningless enclaves.

Goa has a population of just over half a million. It falls into three classes. The upper class—perhaps a few hundred families—speaks Portuguese, educates its children in Lisbon, has connections with Portugal, and holds the few administrative and business plums there are.

Its vested interest is for separation from India and the status quo. Its interests are looked after by the Military Governor sent out from Portugal to run the town and the garrison with its Portuguese officers and their families. The middle class is small and the Africans are perhaps not much interested in the defence of Goa.

Then there is the middle class. Like the upper class, it is Roman Catholic of sixteenth-century Jesuit vintage, but it speaks English instead of Portuguese. There were no adequate schools in Goa, and sending children to Portugal was too expensive; so they sent them to next-door British India.

The Goan middle class exports to India, Karachi, and the Persian Gulf generations of clerks, nannies, engine-drivers, nurses, P. and P. officers, missionaries, doctors, and civil servants—the youngest Cardinal.

Then comes the lower class, the peasantry and the fishfolk, nearly half of whom are Roman Catholic, but who, whether Catholic or Hindu, are quite undistinguishable from the peasants and fishfolk of the Indian Konkani to the north and south. This peasantry, too, exports manpower—but never woman-power—and cooks in Bombay, are overwhelmingly Goan Christians, as are many ship stewards. Thus Goa, like Yemen, is a great country for emigrants' remittances.

Politically Goans are good Indians, with the exceptions of the upper class, whose special position would be jeopardised and whose knowledge of Portuguese would become useless if Goa were to join India, and of those whose fortunes are made out of the law and smuggling into India.

Goa is a smuggler's paradise, with whisky at 12s a bottle against 57s in India, cigarettes at 2s against 8s in India, nylon at 7s 6d against no nylons in India, and gold and diamonds galore while import of gold and diamonds is prohibited into India. Moreover the state of Bombay, which surrounds Goa, is dry—Goa is wet.

Thus, in this delightfully archaic little colonial town, with its air of a Mediterranean fishing port of days gone by, the stage is set for a siege.

Yet there can be no siege, for India will not attack; nor will she apply economic sanctions, for they would only recoil on India's own supporters.

So a silent gentleman's status quo has been struck with the sleepy little port with its quaint stone houses, its wine shops, its crosses, its Jesuit style churches, its feather-moppy coconut trees, and the bright sails of the smuggler's countrymen.

Nothing will happen because nothing can happen until the sleepy peasants wake up to the call of some dark-skinned Joan of Arc.

Meanwhile Goa has struck it rich: large mines of manganese and iron ore have been found and a booming trade has started with Japan, minting gold for the Portuguese and their upper-class protectors, and since Goa is still one of those blessed lands where wine is good and income tax low, fortunes ripen overnight.

The Portuguese liability of yesterday is fast becoming an asset for manganese is a dollar-earner and the world is always hungry for iron.

The mantle of Joan of Arc may yet fall on the shoulders of Senior Briganga Cunha, whose escape from a Lisbon gaol and journey to Bombay are already causing ripples of political emotion among the many Goans who have made the suburbs of Bombay their second home.

Atomic Tests In Australian Central Desert

Canberra, July 21. The Australian Minister for Supply, Mr. Howard Beale, said today that preparations for Britain's coming atomic tests had been going on for some months. The site, in the desert of Central Australia, had been chosen three years ago.

The Acting Australian Prime Minister, Sir Arthur Fadden, announced on June 24 that the tests would be made without giving a date.

Mr. Beale said today that preparations had been "on a large scale."—Reuter.

NATIONAL HOLIDAY BOYCOTTED

Brussels, July 21. Several groups of former Resistance men and old soldiers in Antwerp today refused to take part in official ceremonies to mark Belgium national holiday, "Dynasty Day," as a protest against the Government's alleged leniency towards convicted wartime collaborators with the Germans.

Instead, they held their own meeting in an Antwerp park and laid a wreath at the foot of a monument to King Albert I—Belgium's "Soldier King" of the First World War.

In Brussels, a military review was the climax to the celebrations marking the anniversary of the accession to the throne of Leopold of Saxe-Coburg on July 21, 1835.

Belgian Air Force planes roared overhead as 5,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen marched past with tanks, guns, jeeps and other vehicles. They were reviewed by King Baudouin.—Reuter.

EDEN RETURNING ON SATURDAY

New York, July 21. Mr. Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, who is convalescing at Newport, Rhode Island, after his recent operation, was said today to be "very well."

He and Mrs. Eden will fly back to Britain on Saturday, from Boston. He will hold a press conference at the airport before taking off.—Reuter.

General Assembly Expected To Be Called In Mid-August

TO TAKE UP KOREA ISSUE

New York, July 21.

A post-armistice session of the United Nations General Assembly is unlikely to be held until the middle of August even if the Korean truce is signed within the next few days, according to United Nations officials tonight.

One estimate was that August 13 might be a likely date.

The Assembly is due to be called back to take up again the Korean question when it has been notified officially regarding an armistice agreement.

The United Command in Korea will first notify the Security Council and the Council will pass on the information to the General Assembly.

The 60-member nations will be informed of the reconvening of the Assembly by the President, Mr. Pearson, the Canadian External Affairs Minister.

The Assembly is expected to discuss the arrangements for the political conference which, under the terms of the armistice, will be called within 90 days.

Presumably it will decide which countries shall represent the United Nations at the talks and possibly decide upon the site.

AVOIDING TROUBLE

Ceylon and Geneva have been mentioned prominently but unofficially as likely places for the conference.

One school of thought believes that the talks should be held in Asia and that Colombo, the capital of Ceylon, would be an ideal place. Others favour Geneva because it has ready-made conference facilities.

The United Nations will be ready to start the political conference wherever it is held. It is doubtful whether the Assembly will attempt to lay down an agenda for the conference, and, in fact, will probably try to avoid a controversy as much as possible.

Some delegates are hopeful that when it is held, the post-armistice session will not take up more than a few days, especially as the Assembly is due to begin its next regular session on September 15.—Reuter.

ATLEE'S CALL

London, July 21. Mr. Clement Atlee, the Opposition leader, speaking in the House of Commons, during the foreign affairs debate, urged a meeting of the United Nations Assembly because it was not yet certain that the Korean armistice would go through.

He said it was desirable because there was need "for the public opinion of the world to help in the control of Dr. Syngman Rhee" and because there was need to consider the kind of settlement which ought to emerge after Korea.

He very much doubted if they would get a settlement if the discussion was confined to Korea.

The Chinese were concerned with Formosa.

All these matters should be discussed by the United Nations, he said.

"Some wider settlement would bring both East and West together," he said.

Mr. Atlee, in another reference to Korea, commented: "Personally I think General Mark Clark (the United Nations Commander) has played a very good part in the last few days."—Reuter.

Britain's Shipyards Still Lead The World

London, July 22.

British shipyards are constructing 35.2 per cent of the world's total merchant ships, states Lloyd's Register shipbuilding returns, released today.

The returns, for the three months ended June 30, showed Britain is building 317 vessels of 2,123,565 tons, a decrease of 9,338 tons over the previous quarter.

Total number of ships under construction in the world, excluding Russia, Poland and China, for which there are no records, is 4,162 of 6,937,432 tons gross, an increase of 22,075 tons.

Total tonnage under construction in shipyards abroad is 3,913,807 tons, an increase of 42,013 tons.

The United States is in second place with 658,080 tons, an increase of 15,273 tons.

Construction of oil tankers was up 152,973 tons.

Eighty-three of the tankers are for Great Britain and 49 for Norway.

The United States has 29 on order.—Reuter.

Reluctant Beauties

It was so puzzling...the pretty girls of Bath, Kent, just waiting for the "carnival queen" contest for Deal, Walmer and Kingsdown regatta.

Last year no queen could be chosen—only a couple of girls entered. It was the first cancellation since 1927, apart from the war.

Then a man on the selection committee suggested they must be afraid to have it decided at a public parade that they are not the most beautiful.

So the committee have announced that this year the contest will be private and the judges will be from Kingsdown. No names or photographs except those of the winners will be published.

Now 33 girls have entered.

Walking from Queen's Chapel, Marlborough Gate, to the christening party held in the Princess Royal's apartments in St. James's Palace are the parents, the Hon. Gerald and Mrs. Lascelles, with their baby son, the Princess Royal (mother of the Hon. Gerald), and the Duchess of Gloucester (the grandmother) on the left. ### THE QUEEN'S PLAYERS (4)

Kenneth Tynan nominates another top personality of the contemporary theatre

At ten he was a boy prodigy.

Now he is—

THE FASTIDIOUS ROMPER of 53

COWARD
in private his wit is unforgotten

TO be famous young and to make fame last: the secret of combining the two is glandular: it depends on energy. Someone once asked Demosthenes what was the most important quality in an orator: "Action," he said. And the second? "Action." And the third? "Action." So with a talent.

Noel Coward, who was performing in public at 10, has never stopped being in action, at 53 he retains all the heady zest of adolescence. Forty years ago he was slightly in Peter Pan, and you might say that he had been wholly in Peter Pan ever since. No private considerations have been allowed to deflect the drive of his career; like Gielgud and Rattigan, like the late Ivor Novello, he is a congenital bachelor.

He began like many other satirists (Evelyn Waugh, for instance), by rebelling against conformity, and ended up making his peace with it, even becoming its outspoken advocate. Any child with a spark of fantasy in its soul is prone to react against the English middle classes, into which Coward was born.

He bit teacher

The circumstances of his early upbringing, in Teddington, were "liable," he wrote afterwards, "to degenerate into refined gentility unless carefully watched."

He promptly reacted against them, and also against his first school-teacher, whom he bit in the arm—"an action which I have never for an instant regretted." From this orgy of rebellion he accepted his mother, a tiny octogenarian, who is now comfortably installed in a flat in Eaton Square.

With the production of The Vortex in 1924, notoriety hit him. He had already written two other plays and most of a revue, and had already announced that his own wit and Ivor

Novello's profile were the first and second wonders of the modern world.

The Vortex, a jeremiad against narcotics, with dialogue which sounds today not so much stilted as high-heeled, was described by Beverley Nichols as "immortal." Others, whom it shocked, were encouraged in their heresy by an unfortunate photograph for which Coward posed, supine in a knobby brass bedstead, wearing a dressing-gown and "looking," as he said, "like a heavily doped Chinese illusionist."

From this sprang the myth that he wrote all his plays in an absolute-drenched coma; in fact, as he has been patiently explaining for nearly thirty years, he drinks little and usually starts punishing his typewriter at 7 a.m.

Sauce, he said

His triumph has been to unite two things ever dissociated in the English mind: hard work and wit. Toll is commonly the claim of serious-mindedness; and though, within Coward, a social historian and philosopher are constantly campaigning to be let out, they seldom escape into his work.

His wit in print is variable—he has not written a really funny play since Present Laughter in 1941—but in private it is unflagging. It took Coward to describe an American adaptation of The Cherry Orchard, set in the deep South, as "A Month in the Wrong Country," and many other theatrical men have been fathered on him. We may never know, for example, whether it was he who, after seeing a certain actress as Queen Victoria, left the theatre murmuring:

"I never realised before that Albert married beneath him."

To see him whole, public and private personalities combined, you must see him in cabaret. Just before his first season at the Café de Paris, I noticed him watching his predecessor, whose act was not going too well. I asked how he was enjoying the performance, and with a stark, stoned take-it-or-leave-it stare, he hissed: "Sauce! Sheer sauce!"

A finger waggle

A few weeks later he came thrashing down the stairs himself, balanced before the microphone on black suede-clad feet and, upraising both hands in a gesture of benediction, set about demonstrating how these things should be done.

Baring his teeth as if unveiling some grotesque monument and cooing like a baritone dove, he gave us I'll See You Again, and the other bat-wing melodies of his youth. Nothing he does on these occasions sounds strained or arid: his tanned leathery face is still an enthusiast's.

All the time the hands are at their task affectionately calming your four-kind applause. Amused by his own frolicsome "ness," he wags his finger from side to side, waggling a finger if your attention looks like wandering. If it is possible to romp fastidiously, that is what Coward does.

He owes little to earlier wits, such as Wilde or Labouchere. Their best things need to be delivered slowly, even lazily: Coward's emerge with the staccato, blind impulsiveness of a machine-gun.

I have heard him accused of having parroted English comedy by making it languid and blasé. The truth, of course, is the opposite: Coward took sophistication out of the refrigerator and set it bubbling on the hob.

He is a great thrower, as anyone knows who has visited his home in Kensington. Hidden in a mews, it resembles an ultra-smart rural tavern, with doors of glass and wrought-iron, and few-smelling panelling.

Its centrepiece is his lofty studio, where there are paintings everywhere but on the floor, some by the proprietor who is a keen amateur, and of whom, over the door, there is an excellent oil by Clemence Dane. Two grand pianos stand on rostrums in opposite corners.

The room could easily freeze conversation: but suddenly Coward enters, and even if you are new to him, sets the air urgently buzzing with questions—what are you doing, and for whom, and for how much, and have you had the misfortune to meet that terrible man and his equally ghastly daughter, and how can you bear it?

With pauses

Coward does his sentences with pauses, as you doze off with drugs. To be with him for any length of time is exhausting and invigorating in roughly equal proportions.

He is perfectly well aware that he possesses "star quality," which is the lodestar of his life. In this case, it might be defined as the ability to project without effort, the outline of a unique personality, which has never existed before him in print or paint.

Even the youngest of us will know, in 50 years' time, exactly what we mean by "a very Noel Coward sort of person."

← 'HOW'... by FILES

"RED RADIO GOES ALL B.B.C." say the headlines, and an East Berlin announcer says, "Cheerfulness and humour will figure increasingly. We will fight our enemies with satire. Even with laughter. We shall use the simple language of the worker." So here we have the East Berlin investigators all over the B.B.C., checking up on how it's done. The fact that a telephone conversation of Gilbert Harding with some fool who mistook him for Richard Glendinning was misinterpreted as "the simple language of the worker" is beside the point.

Nathaniel Gubbins

"Continental children, instructed to follow B.B.C. broadcasts to learn colloquial English, are probably puzzled by cricket commentaries."—Understatement in one of my papers.

PAPA. Yes, Pierre? Are the English cruel, Papa? No, Pierre. They are very kind to animals and foreigners.

Then why do they make frenks and imbeciles play their game of cricket? It is not kind, Papa.

No, Pierre. It is not kind. But perhaps you are mistaken? No, Papa. I listen to Monsieur Arlot, and he says two of the English side are imbeciles. One is a silly mid-on and the other a silly mid-off.

The words may have other meanings, Pierre. But no, Papa. Silly in English is the same as stupid. "Mid" means 'half way, and my colloquial English tell me that "off" may mean the same as 'off' 'lead. So one perhaps is 'half way round ze bend and ze ozzer quite mad. It is not nice, Papa. No, it is not nice, Pierre. I also listen to Monsieur Swanton, and he says one bowler he bowl with one short leg, and ze ozzer he bowl with two short legs. Even one of ze umpires is a cripple.

A cripple, Pierre? Monsieur Swanton says he have a square leg, and one of the poor fieldsmen is so frightened he hide in a gully.

What is a gully, Pierre? My dictionary say a gully is a small ravine, or a drain.

But why is he frightened, Pierre? He may be frightened of ze fast bowlers. Or ze may be frightened of ze mad mid-on. Or he may be mad himself wiz only one short leg. So he take cover in a gully. It is not sporting, is it, Papa?

No, Pierre. It is not sporting.

Letter To A Stomach

MY dear Stomach, Since I gave your measurement (43 inches) for a Royal Naval Minewatching uniform six weeks ago you have not only caused me some personal embarrassment but a great deal of inconvenience to the Nore Command.

Up till now I have received one pair of boots, two lovely blue shirts, a black tie, a watch coat, a smashing blue beret with a blue and gold badge depicting a silver mine blowing up in a silver sea, and a pair of trousers a foot too long.

They are a foot too long because Service trousers are made for properly proportioned men, who should be at least 7ft. tall. If their stomachs—measure 43 inches.

I have now had a note from The Nore, where I must be the laughing stock of the quarter-master's stores, to say that my size in blouse, working dress, is "not available." This is because you are a little bigger than my chest, and because the Navy does not make blouses for barrels.

The situation now is that I shall either have to resign from the minewatching service, or accept the largest blouse, which is made for giants, and bring ridicule on the Service by wearing a blouse big enough for the Queen of Tonga, and tripping over my trousers.

Another and happier alternative is to take a holiday in Paris wearing the pretty blue shirt and the smashing beret, and sell picture postcards outside the Café de la Paix.

You early comment on this urgent matter will be appreciated.

Sir, In reply to your undated letter, I have no comment to make, except that I was born a normal size, and anything that has happened since is entirely your own fault. Self-indulgence and a slim figure do not go together. "Be sure your sins will find you out."

Faithfully,
Your Stomach.

How To Avoid Income Tax

I HAVE lost the clipping about the American doctor who said that hypnosis is becoming a fad, that almost any strong minded character could practise it with a little training. So I can't tell you the doctor's name.

But if I had been born with a strong character I would start the treatment tomorrow on Mr Bloodsucker, the Income Tax Inspector.

There he would be in his office, leaning back in his comfortable chair, looking reflectively out of the window and saying:—

"I'm sorry, Mr Gubbins, but if you can't find the money I shall be obliged to take proceedings."

"Look at me, Bloodsucker," I would say sharply.

His eyes would snap back from the window, and stare into mine.

"You are going to sleep, Bloodsucker," I would say. "Sleep, you so-and-so, sleep sleep sleep."

The lids would come down over the crafty eyes, his mouth would sag open, his hands fold across his stomach, and the catarrh in his nose make the morning hideous with his snores.

"My name is Gubbins, Bloodsucker," I would say. "Remember, U for Ugh, B for Blast you, B for Blast you, I for I hate you, N for Nerts, and S for So-and-So."

His eyes would snap back, but will not owe you any money. What's more, Gubbins will never owe you any money. What's even more, you will owe Gubbins money—all the taxes he has ever paid. Wake up, Bloodsucker, and write a cheque.

And that, children, is how I became one of the idle rich, and lived happily ever after.

STEPPING INTO BERIA'S SHOES

By RALPH HEWINS

Stockholm. Malenkov's viewpoint all the time, and must have been keeping a watchful eye on Beria lest he should try to establish a post-Stalin one-man dictatorship, as now charged.

Anyway, Kruglov is the man: experienced, available for the job now Beria has been eliminated. At various times, during the last 10 years, he has been Minister of the Interior and Minister of Internal Affairs.

He is clever as well as tough. He avoided responsibility for the doctor's plot, takes steadily before Stalin's death, and how attributed to Beria.

The former Minister of State Security, Abukov, was Beria's protégé, staging the accusation that the doctors murdered, or tried to murder, Soviet leaders.

Abukov has been under arrest since last year, and will probably be key witness for the prosecution against Kruglov's task is to collect conclusive evidence against Beria.

This indicates that Malenkov has all along been stronger than most experts believed. And that Kruglov has been playing a double role for years, pretending to be Beria's right-hand man, but reporting on him to party secretary Malenkov.

It remains to be seen whether Kruglov can now avoid the eventual liquidation suffered by all his predecessors except one. This will largely depend on whether he continues to submit to party discipline or tries his half-million private army, 20,000,000 slave workers and myriad spies, for his own aggrandizement.

His promotion, though means that the Secret Police have not been abolished.

Ticker-Tape Reception For Hogan

New York, July 21. Ben Hogan, the American Golf Champion, returned to the United States today after his victory in the British Open Golf Tournament looking thin and a bit wan.

His wife, Valerie, who traveled with him, said he was "thoroughly exhausted" and told reporters in a shipboard interview in the liner United States that she was "worried about him."

Hogan won the Masters Tournament, and his fourth United States Open Golf Championship before making his first trip to Britain, a victorious one at Carnoustie, Scotland.

"I would like to see him not try for any more big championships if he has to work as hard as he did for these," Mrs. Hogan said. "I would rather he started playing just for fun."

New York City is preparing to give Ben Hogan a hero's welcome with a ticker-tape parade and a civic reception at City Hall.

During his interview he talked like anything but a man who was ready to give up the game. "I plan to continue playing golf," he said, "and I am certain I will play again in the Open. Whether I play in a British tournament again is a question. That is a long way off. I will decide when the time comes."

"But right now I am very tired of traveling and very tired of playing golf. The way I feel now I don't know whether I would like to go after these three tournaments again in the same year," he added.

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY"

Washington, July 21. President Eisenhower today congratulated golfer Ben Hogan on being "an envoy extraordinary in the business of building friendship for America."

Mr. Eisenhower, an ardent golfer, telephoned to Hogan, recent winner of the British Open Golf Championship, at New York where the golfer was receiving a ticker-tape reception.

"Millions of Americans would like to participate with the New Yorkers today who are extending their traditional welcome on your return from your magnificent victory," said the President.

"We are proud of you, not only as a great competitor and a master of your craft, but also as an envoy extraordinary in the business of building friendship for America," United Press.

HONGKONG DEFEAT SYDNEY

Sydney, July 21. The touring Hongkong Eastern soccer team beat Sydney by three goals, to one at the Sydney Cricket Ground today after leading by 2-0 at half time.

The Hongkong side, who lost the opening match to New South Wales by 4-3 last Saturday, were deserved winners of today's match — the second of their visit.

They gave a delightful exhibition of clever, speedy football, and were never seriously troubled by the local eleven.

Hongkong took the lead when Chu Wing-keung netted from the penalty spot soon after play began.

Sydney then dominated for a brief spell but found Hongkong's goalkeeper, Yu Yui-jak, unbeatable as he jumped and dived to make several spectacular saves.

Hongkong went two up when Hau Ching-to streaked down the wing and squared to Szeto Man right in front of the goal mouth for the latter to tap the ball into the net.

Hongkong increased their lead to 3-0 two minutes after resumption when Ho Ying-fun took the ball through and, after passing two defenders, centred neatly to Lee Chung-fat, who beat the Sydney goalie with a fast ground shot.

Sydney saved a shut-out with a goal towards the end of the game, which drew a crowd of 6,000 spectators.—Reuter.

WATER POLO LEAGUE

Two Colony Water Polo League matches were played at the Royal Naval Dock yesterday when the Royal Naval Porpoises beat the Land Forces, 6-2, and the Royal Naval Dolphins beat the Royal Air Force 6-1.

The match, between South China and the Chinese Civil Service, was postponed.

British Athletes To Have Matches With France, Germany And Sweden

London, July 21. Although the recently completed Amateur Athletic Association Championships are regarded by some diehard pundits as the peak of Britain's track and field season, most fans agree that they merely provide a curtain raiser for the stiff programme of international competition scheduled for the second half of this season.

The real testing time for British athletes starts the first week in August, when Britain meets France in the annual two-day track meet at London's White City and continues four weeks later when another British team meets Western Germany in Berlin and Sweden in Stockholm.

Athletic officials now appear to have woken up to the fact that British athletes cannot be expected to hibernate during August and then come out end turn in record-shattering performances during September.

International competition is the only way in which Britain can prove she is still in the top class in European track and field and the Amateur Athletic Association have certainly gone the whole distance in arranging matches against two of Europe's top competing nations—Germany and Sweden.

The Berlin match, according to some sports writers, will be the toughest international match Britain has ever had to face. It will be the test, they say, by which British athletes will be judged as to their world standing, and the result of the match is expected to be very close.

British track and field had a big let-down at Helsinki. Before the Olympics Britishers were tipped to win several gold medals, and in actual fact they failed to take one, due perhaps to underestimation of foreign competitors. This year, in the international matches with Sweden and Germany at least, a victory for Britain is not very probable.

According to some sports writers here, the AAA have been so busy praising the improved performances of British athletes—especially in the field events—over recent years that they have not realized that the rest of the world has been making considerable progress, too.—United Press.

OLYMPIC CHAMPIONS

The Hungarian delegation, also large, will include swimmer Eva Szekely, hammer thrower Jozsef Czernak, swimmers Antalinn Szoke and Valeria Gyongye, and three fencers: a top ranking track star.

Jamaica is sending Olympic 400-meter champion George Rhoden and his great rival, "Hustling Herb" McKenley, while from East Germany will come the complete cycling team which won the Prague-Berlin-Warsaw race earlier this year.

Czechoslovakia's triple Olympic champion Emil Zatopek and his wife Jevlana, thrower Dana Zatopekova, have also announced their intention of taking part in the track events, together with Cuba's top sprinter, Rafael Fortun Chacon.

The Finnish delegation is expected to comprise 180 members, many of whom represented their country in various sports at the Helsinki Olympics.—United Press.

Henricks' Visit Extended

All local swimming fans will be delighted to learn that the one-day visit by the young Australian swimmer, Jon Henricks, has now been extended to five days.

Henricks will arrive on August 8 and will remain until August 13.

The HKASA is to be congratulated in its decision to provide local swimmers and enthusiasts with the opportunity of seeing Henricks in action, by having arranged three gala days for August 8, 10 and 12. The venue will be announced later.

FRANCASAL MYSTERY UNSOLVED

London, July 21. Scotland Yard detectives watched all British sea and air exits today for several men they think were involved in an attempted £250,000 betting coup at Bath, in Western England, last Thursday.

An unknown French horse named Francasal or another horse named Santa Amaro which might have been switched—won the first race at 10-1.

Francasal was found by police on Sunday night after a 72-hour search in a barn belonging to a horse transporter near Reading, 50 miles west of London. In the barn was Santa Amaro, similar in colour and markings to Francasal.

Both horses were examined yesterday by experts and their report will be handed today to Superintendent Reginald Spooner, who is in charge of the inquiries.

No definite conclusions will be reached as to whether the horses were switched until then. Scotland Yard have asked the French police to help them in their enquiries.

Singapore Not Going To Defend Rugger Trophy

Singapore, July 21. Singapore will not defend the All-India Cup which she won at the All-India Rugger Championships at Colombo in February.

The President of the Singapore Rugby Union, Mr. H. F. Clements, told the annual general meeting that the Union had decided to participate in the next meeting at Bombay.

The cup will be returned to the All-India Rugby Union who are sponsors of the tournament.—United Press.

Six World Records And The Best Part Of The Season Still Ahead

By "RECORDER"

The score in world athletic records for 1953 is six — not counting two by women's relay teams. These are 880 Yards in 1 minute 48.6 seconds by Malvin Whitfield (USA), Six Miles in 28 minutes 19.4 seconds by Gordon Pirie (Great Britain), the Hop, Step and Jump at 53 feet 2 7/8 inches by Yuriy Shcherbakov (USSR), the Shot Put at 59 feet 2 3/4 inches by Parry O'Brien (USA), the Discus Throw at 190 feet 7 1/2 inches by Fortune Gordien (USA), after Sim Iness had brought the record up to 190.07, and the High Jump at 6 feet 11 1/2 inches by Walter Davis (USA).

The Four-Minute Mile has still to come and is likely practically any day of the week any time in the next 10 weeks. In a recent article we dealt with the hubbub that the Finnish runner, Dennis Johansson had raised by omitting to mention Roger Bannister as a possible rival at man under four minutes.

Gaston Reiff disagrees and thinks that Bannister is the man. But the man who came nearest to the Four-Minute Mile, Gunnar Ing of Sweden, who returned 4:01 at Malme Sweden, in 1941, has different ideas from Johansson or Reiff.

His best bet is Rolf Lamers, the little German runner who led the Helsinki 1,500 Metres final for three laps and was still strong enough at the end to finish fifth.

In addition to the Mile record other current world records in grave danger of being surpassed this year are in the Three Miles, 5,000 Metres, 10,000 Metres, 110 Metres Hurdles, High Jump and Javelin Throw.

Gordon Pirie is certain that he can beat Gunder Hagg's 13:32.4 for Three Miles. On June 20 this year he came within 0.4 seconds of this mark. Pirie is also a serious challenger to the world records for 5,000 and 10,000 Metres, as is the Russian, Aleksandr Anufriyev.

Pirie's 28:19.4 for the Six Miles at the AAA Championships beat Viljo Heino's former world record of 28:30.8 at Kuopio, Finland, in 1949, by a very handy 11.8 seconds.

Heino, when he was setting up that record, was killing two birds with one stone. On the same occasion he ran the extra 376.11 yards to the 10,000 Metres mark in another 56.4 seconds.

Add on 56.4 seconds to Pirie's new world mark for Six Miles and we get 29:15.8—13.2 seconds short of Zatopek's world record for 10,000 Metres. Pirie has a surprising ability to take 28 seconds off his former best performance, as he did at the AAA Championships. What is another 14 seconds to a great-hearted runner with boundless confidence in himself?

It's just a matter of who gets there—Pirie or Anufriyev. The Russian, already has more steam than Zatopek ever had. His 13:58.8 and 29:23.2 for the two metric races at Kiev in the space of two days in June is more fast running than Zatopek has ever accomplished.

In the High Hurdles, Jack Davis came within a tenth of a second of the world record when he returned 13.6 seconds at Stockton, California, on June 13. There was a slight following wind. At the same meeting, Franklin Heid, who had a practice throw of 201 feet earlier this season, reached out to 240 feet 1 1/2 inches with the Javelin.

Held, also, has a Russian rival, Vladimir Kuznetsov, who reached 230 feet exactly—only 8 feet 2 3/4 inches short of Yrjo Nikkanen's world record standing since 1938.

The season hasn't started properly in Scandinavia and is not in really high gear anywhere in Europe. It may yet well be a year with a dozen new world records.

One of Dennis Johansson's five nominees as the runners likely to get under four minutes for the Mile—Sweden's Sune Karlsson—took the lead as the year's fastest 1,500 Metres runner when at Gavio on June 23 he ran the distance in 3:44.2—just 1.2 seconds off the world record.

In second place was no other than Dennis Johansson himself in the new Finnish record time of 3:45.2.

On June 14 at Sodertalje came the biggest surprise of the season when 32-year-old Bertil Albertsson, better known as a 10,000 Metres runner, staggered the crowd by clocking 3:49.4 for 1,500 Metres. Though beaten by Ingvar Eriksson, who clocked 3:48.4, Albertsson had beaten his previous best time for the 1,500 Metres by 14 seconds!

Meanwhile Werner Lueg, one of the three joint holders of the world record for the 1,500 Metres, demonstrated at Hamm on June 23 that he intended to remain well in the running.

Lueg beat an international field in 4:07.8. Place times were—Ingvar Eriksson (Sweden) 4:08.0, Lundberg (Sweden) 4:08.2, Rolf Lamers (Germany) 4:08.4, Gunther Dohrow (Germany) 4:08.6.

Best performances to date, complete for the European season up to July 4 and for the whole of the American season, exclusive of some late June and early July marks, follow:

More Trade Mission Members Arrive Back In The Colony

Six more members of the unofficial British Trade Mission to China which recently concluded commercial contracts with China worth £15,000,000 each way, returned here in the ss Yochow from Shanghai this morning.

The six were Mr Wilfred King, Director of the Propane Co., Ltd., Mr John K. Milner, Assistant General Manager of Kreglinger and Ferman, Ltd., Mr A. A. E. Poulton, Director of H. M. F. Faure and Co., Ltd., Mr S. A. Rotheray, Director of Hirsch, Son and Rhodes, Ltd., Mr Harold Hildred Spencer, Senior Executive of Crompton Parkinson, Ltd., and Mr Kenneth G. Treherne, Executive of Hill Brown, Ltd.

Mr King disembarked immediately at Kowloon Bay and took a plane for nearby Kai Tak for England.

All the arrivals said they were very well received by the Chinese as well as the British communities, but added that their mission was fully explained by Mr Roland Berger, Director of the British Council for the Promotion of International Trade, who arrived here from China with six others last Friday.

Mr Spencer, one of the members who came down this morning, expressed the opinion that the prospects of trade with China have improved. He reported that he had signed provisional contracts for his firm which deals in electrical equipment, but he declined to name the figures.

Asked whether the British goods contracted would be used by China for her industrialisation in her present five-year plan, Mr Spencer pointed to goods such as wool, woollens and dyestuffs that were part of the contracts.

CONTRACTS EXPLAINED

Mr Berger, referring to his statement of last week, said that there were two kinds of contracts: (1) the "firm" contract, for which export licences have already been granted by the British Board of Trade, and (2) the "provisional" contract, which will be dependent for its execution upon the granting of the requisite export licence by the British Government. If no licence is to be granted on materials deemed to be strategic materials to Communist China, then the contracts of the "provisional" nature would be null and void, said Mr Berger.

There are still three members of the mission in China. They are Mr C. G. Comerall, Chairman and Managing Director of the China Exporters' Association, Ltd., one of the two Hongkong businessmen in the mission, Mr Jack Perry, Chairman and Managing Director of the London Export Corporation, Ltd., and Mr Generali is expected to return from Shanghai by sea on Friday while both Mr Perry and Buckman are still in Peking.

Two other members of the mission, which represented 150 British manufacturers, Mrs Joan Robinson, Vice-Chairman of the British Council for the Promotion of International Trade, and Mr Sidney Arthur Lane, Director and General Manager of the British Abco Group of Companies, are in Peking for England by way of Moscow.

Franc Rumours Dying Down: Devaluation Not Likely At Present

(By Sydney S. Campoli, Reuter's Financial Editor)

Although the forward discounts on the French franc remain ominously large, rumours of early devaluation have remarkably died down.

For internal political reasons the Laniel Government is expected to last at least until the autumn. It is regarded as a caretaker government, whose main job will be to keep things going rather than to make major changes, let alone so drastic a change as devaluation.

Yet this is not certain. A couple of months ago the feeling in informed quarters outside France was that as soon as there was a government strong enough to do anything, it would do a devaluation.

Mr. Laniel's government does not deny the existence of a strong franc. But there is always a chance that it will prove itself to be so, and in any case a more recent idea outside France was that some "unknown" might become premier to carry the unpopular task of a devaluation, whereas some better known premier would perform the needed reforms. On his installation, M. Laniel certainly qualified as an unknown.

The French rate is not the same thing as the franc. Of late the French authorities have consistently had to support the franc in the market, particularly by selling D-marks.

THE LATEST RUBBER PRICES

London, July 21.
The rubber market was quiet after a little steady improvement. Number one RSS closed 1/4 higher at 10 1/2 pence per lb. The closing rates were as follows:

Spot	1953-1954
August	10 1/2
September	10 1/2
October	10 1/2
November	10 1/2
December	10 1/2
January	10 1/2
February	10 1/2
March	10 1/2
April	10 1/2
May	10 1/2
June	10 1/2

NEW YORK MARKET

New York, July 21.
Rubber futures closed today unchanged to 24 cents lower with sales of four contracts. The contract and spot markets moved lower with the cables, and because of the continued manufacturing interest, although some quarters supposed manufacturers might begin looking over their raw material inventory position. Spot number one RSS were quoted at 24 cents per pound. Futures closings were as follows:

Sept.	24 1/2
Oct.	24 1/2
Nov.	24 1/2
Dec.	24 1/2
Jan.	24 1/2
Feb.	24 1/2

Small Losses Registered On Wall St.

New York, July 21.
The stock market declined again today but losses were small and there was a marked lack of selling pressure.

Sales for the day totalled only 850,000 shares compared to 930,000 yesterday.

Only 1,015 issues appeared on the tape with 458 lower, 273 higher and 284 unchanged.

The average losses of 75 cents in industrials, 62 cents in rails and 15 cents in utilities were the result more of small losses rather than any wide moves.

Brokers continued to list the Korean uncertainties as the number one market deterrent. They look for further irregularity in the market until true terms are finally defined.

Aluminum Company of America fell a point to 40 1/2, and Aluminum Limited fell to 40 1/2 on news that the Government was acting to cancel all contracts.

Auto stocks, which sharply declined yesterday on reports of a slow-down to come in that industry, behaved somewhat better today.

Newly listed Studebaker fell 1/2 point to a new low. Chrysler was down 1/2 to 70 1/2. General Motors held unchanged at $50 1/2.

That strengthens the rate but not the franc—just as Sterling's rate was strengthened but Sterling itself weakened when the Bank of England used to have to buy Sterling by selling gold and dollars.

In the upshot, France last month had an EPU deficit of $57 million while Germany had an EPU surplus of $53 million.

Austria has ceased to be one of the EPU "wards" whose deficits are paid by the U.S.; France has become one.

CANNOT CONTINUE

France's April and May EPU deficits were settled directly by Washington. If the like applies to the June deficit, Washington will have to pay Germany more than $50 million on account of aid to France in a single month.

This cannot continue indefinitely, or perhaps much longer. At a time when the U.S. Congress is clamouring for an early termination of all foreign aid, it verges on the grotesque. Moreover, if France has no choice between devaluation and deflation, deflation seems inevitable.

Even with inflation and weakness of the franc, there is persistent stagnation in general economic activity; deflation would aggravate it to a point which might be politically and socially disruptive.

In recent months the State and the State-owned or controlled enterprises have touched off a new round of wage increases. Exports have been fairly well maintained, thanks to subsidies and differential exchange rates which amount to a devaluation of the franc for export purposes.

The economic stagnation is mainly due to poor demand in the home market. Deflation might be the heroic solution, but hardly a realistic one.

Whatever M. Laniel might prove himself to be, the men behind him are forceful and his Finance Minister is energetic.

QUITE INSUFFICIENT

He has had more success with the Assembly than was expected, and his tenure of office will not necessarily be on sufferance; his Government is supposed to be a provisional one, but there is a French saying that it is only the provisional that lasts.

Yet the powers of his Government seem quite insufficient to cure the deep-seated malady of France's finances.

The extra taxes the Assembly had grudgingly voted will cover only 60 milliard francs of a budget deficit of 700 milliards.

However, unless the powers to cut expenditure may be applied, it is more than doubtful whether they could do all the rest of the job, and in time.

Meanwhile, the financing of the deficit by massive borrowing from the Bank of France is inflationary as can be, and the extra taxes are optimistically reckoned to amortise it in not less than three years.

The French State does its inflationary borrowing in haste, and repays at leisure. Whether or not the fur of France's various deficits can be cured by a surgical operation, it is hardly probable that they can be cured with one—Reuter.

Economic Talks In London

London, July 21.
Anglo-Iraqi trade, financial and economic talks began today when the economic committee of the two countries held its first meeting.

The committee will meet again at the Foreign Office tomorrow and then adjourn for a few days.

The committee was set up last July and the talks are expected to last for about a week.

The committee is examining questions concerning Iraq's full membership of the sterling area. It will also review Iraq's balance of payments with the sterling area and discuss trade prospects between the two countries—Reuter.

Negotiations For Purchase Of Sterling

Tokyo, July 21.

Japanese newspapers reported, that Japan is negotiating for the purchase of pounds sterling with the Bank of International Monetary Fund.

On the theory that Japan's sterling shortage is only temporary, however, the Japanese Government aims at buying back yen with pounds, the press reports said.

This action would be to add to the 210 million yen swap that Japan is trying to negotiate with Great Britain, it was said.

The reports said officials of IMF promised to take up the matter at a meeting of the Board of Directors.

Sugar Prices In N.Y.

New York, July 21.

World Number Four sugar futures today closed three to eight points higher with sales of 484 contracts.

Domestic Number Six sugar closed two points lower to one point higher with sales of 238 contracts.

Cuban producers buying and reports that Germany will buy additional supply combined to bolster the world contract.

Domestic futures moved irregularly as traders awaited clarification of the price situation for the refined article.

The 10-point rise announced by several leading refiners on Monday has not been followed by all companies, the dealers pointed out. Prices of futures closed as follows:

Man Admits Damaging Telephones

Stripped to the waist, a 33-year-old English seaman of the R.R. Keitts, Wilfred Charles Short, stood in the dock before Mr. Hin-shing Lo at Central this morning, charged with malicious damage to two telephones belonging to the Hongkong Telephone Company.

When asked by the Magistrate whether he admitted the charges against him, Short replied, "Oh I broke the phones right."

He was fined $100 and ordered to pay $30 damages. Insp. W. H. B. Howell told the Court that the accused went to 453 Hennessy Road, ground floor, where he consumed some food and wine. He then decided not to pay for the meal and told the proprietor that he had lost $100 in the shop. He dialed 999 on the shop's telephone after which he damaged the receiver down so hard that it broke.

When the Police arrived the defendant told them that it was only an accident, and was let free.

A few minutes later the accused went into 185 Lockhart Road, ground floor, where he again damaged another phone.

The Police were called and the defendant was taken to the station where he was charged with the offences.

A search of the defendant revealed a $100 note hidden in one of his socks.

Magistrate Admonishes Defendant

"If your seat was in line with the gutter as you say then your bonnet would have been protruding into the road," said Mr. Thomas Tam, in Central this morning to a defendant charged with dangerous driving.

All the time you have been telling the Court," he told the defendant, Chang Kwan-yu, "that you are a wonderful man but you won't listen to anybody else. You are the sort of uneducated man that later becomes a mechanic. You probably will become a mechanic. But you should know the real difference between truth and lies. You just don't know. Anything you say that helps you save your skin is the truth.

The defendant was charged with having swerved suddenly and without giving signals, out into the middle of the road from the curb side, in order to get in position to back into his garage. An inspector, driving down the road at the time, had to brake and turn sharply to avoid him.

Mr. Tam had a few words to say about the garage.

"It seems to me the sooner that garage of yours, composed of verandah posts and what have you, is removed, the better."

The defendant was cautioned.

Disobeyed PC's Signal

"When an inexperienced driver meets an experienced Point-Duty Policeman something is bound to happen," remarked Mr. Thomas Tam this morning at Central.

He was speaking to a man, So Yung-hing, who had been charged with not obeying a Policeman's signal at the junction of Hennessy and Fleming Roads on June 1. The defendant was cautioned.

The Magistrate went on to say that when a Point-Duty Policeman was observed giving signals without clear purposes, cars should stop. In any case, "They should not go past the Policeman on duty unless expressly mentioned to do so."

Lost Jewellery Recovered

Los Angeles, July 21. Police said here today that jewellery valued at $71,450 reported missing by the film actress, Andrea Leeds, had been found under a cushion of a sofa at a local department store.

They said a silk bag containing jewellery apparently slipped from the actress's purse while she was shopping. —Reuter.

COURT TOLD OF RUNNING GUN BATTLE

The story of a running gun-battle between the Police and an armed robber following a robbery at a watch shop in Wanchai last April was told at the Criminal Sessions this morning, when Ho Tei, alias Tau Kai-tei, 38, unemployed, went on trial charged with using arms against a person without lawful authority under the Emergency Regulations — which provides for the death penalty on conviction.

The accused was alleged to have shot and wounded PC 618, Ho Shuen, and a British soldier in the course of a Police chase after having allegedly taken part in the robbery at the Tam Lau Kee Watch Shop, 80 Johnston Road, ground floor.

The case is being heard before Mr. Justice C. W. Seccombe, P. J. Judge, and an all-male jury. The accused is defended by Mr. V. L. J. Allen, instructed by Mr. C. S. Ford, Mr. A. Hooton, QC, Solicitor-General, and Mr. Simon L. Crown Counsel, are conducting the Prosecution. Det. Sub-Inspector W. B. Savage is present for the Police.

Giving the facts according to the Prosecution, the Solicitor-General told the jury that the accused was charged under the Emergency Regulations, which provides for the death penalty on conviction.

"It may indeed be unpleasant to sit in any case when the death penalty may be imposed," he went on, "but I suggest that you should, as far as possible, try to put the penalty out of your minds, for it is your duty only to decide on the evidence whether or not this man is guilty of the charge."

Mr. Hooton said the robbery in question took place in a watch shop opposite the Southern Playground. Shortly after 10 p.m. on April 3, the employees of the shop were collecting the watches from the show cases to put them away for the night.

While they were doing so, two men came up. One of them stood near the entrance, while the other walked in, drawing a revolver from his girdle as he did so. This man, Mr. Hooton stated, is alleged to have been the accused.

He told us good a look that he was able to identify the man some weeks later at an identification parade held by the Police.

Continuing, the Solicitor-General told the jury that, after getting the look, the two men ran out of the shop, and turned left. One of the shop fobs blew a silver whistle, and the three of them took up the chase. The two robbers quickened their pace, and turned left into Tai Wong Road East. At the end of that street, they turned right into Queen's Road East, with the fobs in the air, and the three of them still blowing the whistle.

Just at that time, two Police constables were passing by. Hearing the commotion, they saw the accused running. The latter turned into Tai Wong Road West on the way back to Johnston Road. The constables took up the chase.

GUNMAN FIRES
In Tai Wong Road West, Mr. Hooton went on, the gunman turned and fired a shot in the direction of his pursuers. The constables returned his fire, but no one was hit at that stage.

On hearing the junction at Johnston Road, the accused, it was alleged, turned round again and fired. This time the shot hit PC Ho Shuen on the left thigh.

"That was the particular shot that is relied upon in the indictment," the Solicitor-General declared.

He went on to say that the accused then rushed across a stationary tram and took cover behind it. For the next few minutes, there was a game of hide-and-seek involving a row of stationary trams, and finally the accused dashed to the Northern side of Johnston Road. Though shot in the thigh, PC Ho Shuen was still able to keep up the chase, and he and the other constable followed the accused into Thompson Road.

Somewhere near the corner of that road and Johnston Road, the Solicitor-General continued, he fired again at his pursuers, but instead hit a British soldier who was standing near a shop in the leg.

Mr. Hooton told the jury that it was not suggested that the gunman intentionally fired at that particular man. However, this part of the evidence was important, insofar as it would help establish the identity of the gunman.

TOOK COVER

Turning back to the facts, he said the accused then ran into Luard Road, then into Hennessy Road and took cover amongst some cars parked in the centre of the road. Another exchange of fire took place. The accused stopped a taxi, and forced the driver to drive him away from the scene in an easterly direction.

The constables, who by this time had been joined by some detectives, also stopped a taxi and took up the chase once more, but the gunman got away.

About six weeks later, the Police arrested the accused in a cafe and took him into custody.

A five-chamber revolver was found in his girdle, as well as some ammunition.

Mr. Hooton said a ballistic expert would testify that an examination of the bullet found in the leg of the soldier revealed that it had been fired from the revolver found on the accused's person.

The accused was identified by the watch shop fob which he had had a good look at him, and he was subsequently charged.

Hearing is proceeding.

HK Given A New Title

Manila, July 22. Italian Journalist Stello Tomel, who is here on a brief visit, yesterday said that Hongkong was an observatory from which world events could be best gauged.

"It is in this port that the forces of Democracy and Communism meet, not to mention the different races of the world rub shoulders," he said.

Tomel, an official correspondent for Gazzetta del Popolo, added that his tour of the majority of the Far Eastern countries gave him a good picture of the phenomenal resurgence of Asia nationalism.

The Italian journalist declared that the "Old World" and the United States will have to open up to the realization that she controls the destiny of international events." — France Press.
